Community Leader Was Philanthropist And Humanitarian

Israel Sachs, 115 Central Park West, New York, founder and president of Sachs Quality Stores, furniture, furnishings and apparel, and a humanitarian and a leader in philanthropies, died at Grossinger's, in Ferndale, N.Y., where he was on a vacation. His age was 75.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Fannie; Sachs, and three sons: Nathan, William and Abraham M.; a daughter, Mrs. Jeanette M. Hirsch; a brother, Max, and a sister, Mrs. Jennie Miller.

Born in a small Russian town, a son of Charles and Leah Rose Sachs, he came to the United States at the age of 20. Two years later, in 1896, he opened his first store on East 102nd Street in Harlem. During the ensuing half century, his concern grew greatly under his supervision and guidance.

Joined by his sons, Nathan and William, he led his concern into the field of community welfare. Instituting what he termed a "community conscience" into his business, the enterprise grew into the present chain of two stores in Manhattan and two in the Bronx.

Mr. Sachs also sponsored free, adult education courses, free puppet shows for school children and consumer advisory panels. He was a pioneer user of radio advertising. More recently, beginning in the period just before the recent war, he sponsored an advertising series devoted to the American Way that won him many awards.

Mr. Sachs opened his store auditoriums to young people's recreational canteens, sponsored free adult education courses and consumer advisory panels to encourage customer participation in, de[ci]ding store policies and awarding annual interest [illegible] all American employees," published in paid newspaper space, urging them to wipe out unemployment created by the depression by expanding their staffs an average of 25 per cent. He said that such a move in his stores had doubled his business during the depression years.

Mr. Sachs used commercial advertising in New York newspapers and on the radio to stimulate racial and religious tolerance. In 1948 he received one of the first La Guardia awards, established by the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights, for "his leadership in the use of commercial advertising as a vehicle for advancing the cause of better understanding between religious and racial groups."

He received similar awards from the American Veterans Committee, the Jewish War Veterans of the United States and the Riverdale Children's Association. For two years many of his newspaper advertisements contained a column written by the late Mayor F. H. La Guardia.

In 1947 he received one of the annual awards of The New York Age, a Negro weekly publication, to "those who have served the youth of this city by their work in the fight against discrimination and delinquency."

He was a founder of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, a director of the United Jewish Ap-

ABC and HIGH STANDARDS GO TOGETHER

In qualifying for membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations, publishers are doing more than providing advertisers with the facts about the circulation of their publications.

They are also giving active support to the principle that advertising space should be bought and sold only on the basis of verified information — a principle that has contributed to large measure to the interests of all advertisers.

In Canada, the Canadian Jewish Review is still the only Jewish publication printed in any language reaching the Jewish community which is able to claim membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Needs Two Billions In Few Years

Israel's capital requirements for the next few years will total $2,000,000,000, according to a new fifty-page brochure entitled "Investing in Israel," issued by the Jewish Agency for Palestine, 16 East Sixty-sixth Street, New York.

For the first time, it was stated, American investors are furnished in concise form the basic facts of the economy of Israel. These cover profit potentialities, government aids to investors, costs, wages, structure of the economy, foreign trade, currency regulations, government controls, and resources.

"Israel offers both the problems and the vast opportunities of an economy in the pioneering stage of development," the brochure says. It also emphasizes the urgency with which the Israeli Government views large-scale foreign investment, and the need for extending industry, to absorb its huge immigration.

The government's policy, it was pointed out, is to encourage new capital investments and to provide "the most effective and attractive business climate possible." Accordingly, it is passing legislation permitting, among other things, withdrawal of profits and interest, up to 10 per cent of the original investment.

Sizable tax exemptions will be allowed for new enterprises and consideration is also being given to permitting amortization of 20 percent on investments for the first and second years, 15 per cent for the third year and 10 per cent thereafter, together with free importation of machinery, working tools, and the large number of raw materials required for new enterprises.

These inducements are expected to release an increased flow of American capital. The brochure was written by P. Bernard [illegible] man of [illegible] ration of officials of the Government of Israel.

Was Noted As Merchant And Civic Pioneer

Salmon P. Halle, co-founder of the Halle Brothers Company, Cleveland, Ohio, department store, who was a leader in the city's welfare activities for many years, died at the age of eighty-three.

Born there, Mr. Halle retired from active business in 1921, but he had maintained an interest in such activities as the Jewish Welfare Federation, the Art Museum, Mount Sinai Hospital, and the Community Fund.

Four years ago he won the Eisenman award, given for outstanding devotion to welfare. He donated the $500 prize to Mount Sinai Hospital, of which he was one of the founders.

One of the founders of the Community Fund, Mr. Halle for years led a team in the fund drives. He was a member of the trustees of the Cleveland Hospital Service Association and was one of its organizers. In 1932 he was foreman of the county grand jury.

A pioneer in the Cleveland Advertising Club Mr. Halle at one time was president of the National Retail Merchants Association. He was president of the Halle Brothers Company before his retirement.

In 1936 he was named a leader in the campaign to raise funds for the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee for Overseas Relief. He was reappointed to the same position in 1937.

Mr. Halle was an art collector and donated several valuable works to the Art Museum. He was a member of the Euclid Avenue Temple.

Surviving are his widow, the former Carrie Moss; a son, S. Portland Halle, second, of Phoenix, Ariz.; [illegible] daughter, Mrs. Marion [illegible] brother, Samuel H. [illegible] man of the board of the [illegible] and two [illegible]

See Need Of Know-How And Money Invested

Dr. Nahum Goldmann, chairman of the American section of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, and Dr. Israel Goldstein, retiring treasurer, said in New York that Israel is in imperative need of American "know-how" to develop its economic potentialities. The Zionist officials, who recently returned from Israel, called the new state "a bastion of democracy."

Dr. Goldstein, who, with Dr. Goldman, held a press conference at the agency's office at 16 East Sixty-ninth Street, said that Israel cannot bear the burden of absorbing in one year immigration equal to one-third of the existing population. Israel, he added, has only about 160,000 taxpayers, "very few of them in the upper brackets."

Dr. Goldstein and Dr. Goldmann stressed that the funds to permit a large immigration program must come from other Jews, especially from American Jews through the United Jewish Appeal campaign for $250,000,000. This must be augmented by private investments to create employment, Dr. Goldstein said.

Israel's recent offer to accept 100,000 Arab refugees "is considered by the Israelis as a tremendous and nearly unbearable sacrifice," Dr. Goldstein said, adding that Israeli people look to President Truman "to be vigilant against any designs to rob Israel of any part of the Negeb."

Dr. Goldstein said the Agency's goal is to empty the immigrant camps by Passover in 1950, adding that for each immigrant $1,000 of gift funds through the United Jewish Appeal and $1,000 of investment funds are required.

Dr. Goldmann, outlining conditions of Jews in other countries, [illegible] of Jews in Germany [illegible] of only a few camps will remain with perhaps 3,000 invalid or otherwise incapacitated persons who must be rehabilitated before they can emigrate to Israel.

On the subject of immigration to Israel, Dr. Goldmann said there is an improvement with regard to Poland "which has decided to allow every Jew to emigrate to Israel who is ready to renounce his Polish citizenship." He said there was no change in the situation in Hungary and Rumania where only a very small emigration is permitted by the government.

Settlement of Israel's "acute" economic and political problems in all likelihood will take precedence over any adjustment in the relationship there between religious authority and government, said Dr. Goldstein, Rabbi of Congregation

To Irrigate Huge Area In Israel

Planning of the preliminary phases of Israel's counterpart of the Tennessee Valley Authority is nearing completion. When the next dry season starts construction will begin on a network of canals and pipes forming regional irrigation projects that ultimately will be linked up with overall program.

This will mark the first phase of the implementation of a plan by an American engineer, James B. Hayes, to irrigate the parched regions of Israel from the rivers and springs in eastern Galilee and the Coastal plain.

The project forms part of a government development program for which the Knesset (Assembly) appropriated $165,000,000.

One of the water sources in the Hayes plan is Yarkon river which empties into the Mediterranean north of Tel Aviv. Israeli plans for 1950 provide for two pipelines from the Yarkon, one to the Negeb designed to irrigate 40,000 acres, and one to the Jerusalem corridor designed to water 5,000 acres. Jerusalem already gets part of its drinking water by means of an old pipeline from the Yarkon river.

Another phase of the Hayes plan to be started next year is the drainage of the Mulch Valley in the northeast corner of Israel. Half of the 35,000 acre valley is now a swamp. The water will be drained into Jordan.

In addition, spring water in the Beisan Valley, south of the Sea of Galilee, will be collected for the irrigation of 25,000 acres through a network of canals. This water currently runs off into Jordan. Near the Syrian and Lebanese borders water from wells and springs will be piped to hill areas that have been earmarked for fruit tree cultivation. Ten thousand acres in [illegible] sector and a [illegible]

The ultimate plan will irrigate between 1,000,000 and 2,000,000 acres.

The Hayes plan provides for the collection of water from East Galilee rivers and springs into a dried up Lake called Sahl el Battauf, west of the Sea of Galilee, that will be a central reservoir. Through tunnels and canals the water will then be conveyed west and south, picking up the Yarkon River flow en route to the Negeb.

John L. Savage, one of chief engineers of the Tennessee Valley Authority surveyed the situation recently and is writing a report, says the New York Times. A team of Mr. Savage's associates, headed by John C. Cotton, is expected in Tel Aviv in October for a prolonged stay to help the overall planning.

Seminary Honors Distinguished Work Of Lehman, Bunche

Former Governor Herbert H. Lehman, Democratic-Liberal candidate for United States Senator, was installed as chairman of the board of overseers of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America at a convocation ceremony which also included the conferring of an honorary degree on Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, director of the United Nations trusteeship division and former U. N. mediator for Palestine.

More than 1,200 persons attended the ceremony on the lawn of the seminary quadrangle, Broadway and 122nd Street. Five other officers were installed, two other honorary degrees awarded, and citations for distinguished service were conferred by Mr. Lehman on 175 synagogue presidents from all parts of the U.S. and Canada who co-operate with the seminary's program, the convocation being keynoted this year to recognition and encouragement of Jewish lay leadership.

Mr. Lehman heard his name acclaimed by Dr. Simon Greenberg, provost of the seminary, as a synonym "for all that is noble in human character and honorable in public service."

In installing him, Dr. Greenberg said that "no individual in American Jewish history has been more universally beloved and respected by the citizens of America," and that he was regarded by the Jews of America "with an affection compounded of reverence, pride, admiration and overflowing gratitude." Mr. Lehman himself did not speak except to announce the conferring of the citations on the synagogue presidents.

The degree of doctor of humane letters was awarded [illegible] by Dr. Louis Finkel[illegible] table and indispensable service to the cause of human understanding among all peoples."

"Through your endeavours," he told Dr. Bunche, "peace was established in the Holy Land, the just claims of the State of Israel were recognized, and a place of refuge opened to many thousands of homeless men and women."

A reading of his citation by Supreme Court Justice Edgar J. Nathan Jr. was applauded by the persons gathered on the seminary lawn.

Dr. Bunche's sponsors were Jacob Guttman of Philadelphia, secretary of the board of directors, and Dr. Robert Gordis, rabbi of Temple Beth El, Rockaway Park, L. I.

The following, in addition to Mr. Lehman, were installed as semin-

Polish-Born Economist Was U.S. Labor Expert

Dr. Edward Becker Mittelman, chief economist for the International Association of Machinists, independent union since 1946, died in his room at the Taft Hotel, in New York. His age was 59. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Bess Mittelman; a sister, Miss Anne Mittelman, labor adviser to the government of Israel, and two brothers, Charles and Paul Mittelman, both of Milwaukee.

Born in Poland, Dr. Mittelman was brought to the United States at the age of 9 and lived for several years in Milwaukee. He was graduated in 1914 from the University of Wisconsin with a B.A. degree, and six years later received a Ph.D. from the University of Chicago.

An economist and statistician specializing in labor problems, Dr. Mittelman was associated with the late Prof. John R. Commons of the University of Wisconsin in writing "The History of Labor in the United States." He also was a frequent contributor to publications dealing with economics and political science, including The Journal of Political Economy and The Political Science Quarterly.

He was a veteran of the first World War and during the recent conflict served as an economic adviser to the Federal Government in the aircraft production industry. Before that, he taught economics and labor problems at the University of Oregon and Oregon State College. In 1936 he went to Washington, where he served the WPA, the Wage and Hour Division of the Labor Department and the War Production Board, among others.

Dr. Mittelman was interested in unemployment insurance and was author of the report on that subject by the Oregon Unemployment Commission in 1935. He also wrote a report on occupational characteristics of workers on relief for the Oregon Emergency Relief Commission and the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

Well versed on German economic affairs, Dr. Mittelman wrote articles on the German use of unemployment insurance and labor problems. He made many studies of wage questions and was author of a report on the Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen, the organization favored by the Government during the First World War, when the Industrial Workers of the World were active in the lumber sections of the Northwest.

BURKE-KRAVITZ

The marriage of Beatrice, daughter of Mrs. Jennie Kravitz, 5685 Esplanade Avenue, and the late Joseph Kravitz, to Moe M. Burke, 5382 Hutchison Street, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harris Burke, took place at Adath Israel Synagogue, on September 11, at eight o'clock, Rabbi Charles Bender officiating, assisted by Cantor Eugene Goldberger and Rev. M. Mandelcorn. The bride was given in marriage by her mother, and her brother, Samuel Kravitz. She wore a long, white, slipper-satin gown, designed with a heart-shaped neckline, outlined with pearl-bead-embroidery; and a princess bodice, with very full skirt, and train. Her headdress was of pearl-bead-embroidery, similar to that on her dress; with a finger-tip-length veil. She carried two mauve orchids on a mother-of-pearl prayer-book. Miss Sarabel R. Kravitz, the maid of honour, wore a [illegible] and [illegible] ranged with a short tulle veil, and she carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses. Leona Diane Kaufman and Faygie Tenenbaum were flower girls. The former wore a pink crepe dress, with a blue crown, and had a matching purse and a nosegay tied with blue ribbon. The latter wore a blue crepe dress, with a pink crown, and matching purse, and carried a nosegay tied with pink ribbon. Bernard J. Steinberg was best man. The synagogue was decorated with standards of white gladioli and palms. In the synagogue hall, where the reception was held, white gladioli were used to decorate. Mrs. Kravitz, mother of the bride, received, in a steel-gray tissue faille gown, with lace inserts; and had a gray hat, trimmed with pink flowers, and a corsage of pink roses. Mrs. William Liebman, 2010 LeMoyne Street, of Chicago, Ill., sister of the groom, also received, in a blue crepe gown, with a black beaded hat, and corsage of white carnations. An orchestra played. The bride and groom left on a Richelieu boat-trip, the bride travelling in a blue suit, with coral-shaded tissue faille blouse; and black accessories. They are living at 5686 Esplanade Avenue. Mr. and Mrs. H. Goldberg, of Brooklyn, N.Y., were wedding guests.

Largest Orthodox Hospital Celebrates Sixtieth Birthday

It was sixty years ago that Beth Israel Hospital in Manhattan was opened. The forty immigrants, merchants and push-cart peddlers, who financed that philanthropic venture—with contributions of 25 cents a week each—could hardly fail to be impressed by the present tall building, in which this month, Governor Dewey and Mayor O'Dwyer will help celebrate the anniversary. But none of the original founders is living.

Charles H. Silver, vice-president of the American Woolen Company and president of the hospital, told the New York Times of the forty immigrants who financed the original hospital.

"It's not as hard today to do the things we're doing as it was in their time to do what they did with those quarters," he said.

Beth Israel's founders were Orthodox Jews who had fled to this country from persecution in Russia and neighboring countries. They wanted to establish medical services for fellow Jews who would go to no hospital not operated on Orthodox principles. Besides, according to an early report of Beth Israel affairs, there was need of "a hospital that would admit emigrants, as the other city hospitals refused them with less than one year's residence in the city."

This hospital, which started with what they called a free dispensary at 97 Henry Street, cared for 384 patients in its first year. It is now, Mr. Silver said, the largest hospital in this country to hold to Jewish dietary laws and other Orthodox tenets.

But, Mr. Silver pointed out, Beth Israel's staff and patients are received without regard to religious or national considerations. He explained that although Beth Israel was founded and has always been conducted on strictly Jewish orthodox principles it is and always has been open to men of all faiths, and that if a patient's physician prescribes bacon the patient gets bacon and no questions asked. The big hospital building at Seventeenth Street just east of Stuyvesant Park contains altars for Catholic and Protestant rituals, besides the Jewish chapel.

With its periodic spurts the hospital has expanded the variety and extent of its services but new services have outstripped space, according to Dr. Maxwell S. Frank, executive director.

The hospital's thirty-six directors have therefore purchased the land extending from the hospital's present easterly boundary 250 feet east, almost to First Avenue. On this an eleven-story and penthouse addition will be built, adding 150 beds to the present capacity of 458. The hospital is partially supported by the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies.

Plans for the new $3,000,000 structure already have been filed. When approval is received from the city authorities, the hospital will move to clear ninety-four families from the tenements on the site, Dr. Frank said.

To illustrate the part Beth Israel plays in the city's hospital field, Dr. Frank said it had 20,000 bed patients last year, while forty different clinics received 70,000 visits from persons who paid only a fraction of the cost—sixty per cent gave nothing because they could not afford to pay.

"We're never in the black," he added. "Each year we have to make up a deficit. If we didn't, we wouldn't think we were doing anything."

Mr. Silver pointed out that Beth Israel is just at the edge of Stuyvesant Town, while thousands of families have moved into other big new housing projects along the East River. Beth Israel, St. Vincent's and Beekman-Downtown, share the main burden of hospital work below Seventeenth Street, he said, so there is a huge field for service.

Israeli Seamen Receive New Benefits

Improved working conditions and social insurance set-ups have been obtained for officers and seamen in ships operating from Israel through negotiations between the employers and the Palestine Seamen's Union, the International Labor Office of the United Nations reports.

The new agreements provide conditions similar to those in British ships, but there are several improvements. An elaborate cost-of-living allowance is provided and two-week annual vacations are given to seafarers who have had two years' experience, with an extra day added for each additional year at sea. Officers of passenger ships get 20 per cent more than the base pay.

The union is organizing pilots, tugmen, floating crane and dredge operators as well as seafarers.

IN MEMORIAM

BASSIN: In loving memory of a dear husband, father, and grandfather, Solomon Bassin, who passed away October 4, 1947.

Dearer to us than words can tell, was someone we lost and loved so well;
One of the best the world could give, your cherished smile, your heart of gold;
Your life wasn't selfish, for others you lived.
Not for what you received, but what you could give,
A wonderful person in health and in aid, one who was better God never made.
[illegible] loyal and true, one in a million, dear, were you.

Always loved, remembered, and sadly missed by his wife, children and grandchildren.

DEATHS

Older people and people with poor eyesight need more light than [illegible] with normal eyes. [illegible] when prolonged detailed work is being done. Correct lighting prevents damage to the eyes and helps them function at their best. How do your reading habits and the lighting conditions in your home stack up?

Health is not just the absence of disease or infirmity. The World Health Organization says it is also a state of complete mental, social, and physical well-being. To be completely healthy, a person needs not only physical health, he also needs a healthy mind and good social adjustment. The nation's health is the individual's business.

Flies breed at such a pace that it has been estimated that even if only a small proportion survive, the offspring of one female house fly will in seven weeks number 432,000. So, swat that fly. Get rid of him by any means but get rid of him, and, protect your food and keep your garbage covered. Flies are filthy insects with dirty habits. Dirt spells disease, so banish the dirt and you will banish the dirt disease.

And there was Moishe.

It is impossible to state with precision what was his trade or occupation, and, in fact, nobody knew how he earned his livelihood. An ordinary Jew to all appearances, he lived the life of thousands of Jews in Kasrilovka, always dancing attendance on the lord of the manor, that is to say, not upon the lord himself, but on the lesser lordlings who crowded the presence of the great landlord, and to be exact, not even on these satellites of the lord, but the crowd of Jews who were continually hanging around in search of errands, commissions and assignments from the lordlings that surrounded the lord of the manor. Whether he made a living or not, was never revealed because Moishe never complained, never boasted, never made a show of his goodness, or demonstrated any malice. He was always in a happy mood, his kind, bright eyes bristling with joy.

Such was the personality of "Some Moishe," under which nickname he was generally known.

There was not a thing that "Some Moishe" could not perform: build a house, repair a clock, erect a machine, make a lamp, fashion a faucet, produce a mirror, a bucket, a cage — and what not.

True enough, nobody has ever seen the houses that he built, or could point to any clocks or machines that were produced, but every one was sincerely convinced that "Some Moishe" could do all these things....

It happened that we became neighbors with "Some Moishe" under one roof. I said "became", because until then we possessed our own separate household. But due to an unfortunate turn of affairs, and anxious to pay off all our debts, we had to sell the homestead, and on the eve of one New Year, we moved our belongings to Hershke Mamzis, into an old dilapidated cabin, without a patch of green, without a court, without a porch, entirely bare and devoid of any decoration....

"I pray thee," says mother to father, during the ten days of penitence," what do you intend to do about a Succah?"

"You meant to ask, "what are we going to do without a Succah?" father tries to lend a jocular air to the subject.

But I see very well that the question of the "Succah" is causing him mental anguish, as he is turning away his face from us.

Suddenly he turns to us and exclaims: "Sha! Haven't we here Moishe as our neighbor?"

A half an hour later, all three of them, that is: father, "Some Moishe" and our landlord, Hershke Mamzis, were scurrying around the hut, busy selecting an appropriate spot for the location of the Succah.

"Well, Reb Moishe," father says, "where do you plan to erect the Succah?"

And "Some Moishe", pushes his cap away backwards from his forehead, and plunges into deep contemplation, as if he were the great architect. He points with both hands simultaneously first in one direction, then in another, turns one way, then another, and tries to explain that if the quarters were not so wholly outside, if there had been some kind of a fence, then only two walls would be required for the Succah, and it could be built in one day. "Did I say one day? In one hour." But as the habitation has no fenced-in-court-yard, four walls will be required for the Succah. But it will be "some Succah", a wonder Succah.

"The first thing, naturally, will be, to obtain the necessary building material."

"Materials we shall have," retorts Hershke, "have you got the tools?"

"We'll find the tools allright, but can you procure the lumber?" is "Some Moishe's" repartee.

"Sure, there will be all the lumber you want," assures Hershke, "have you plenty of nails?"

"Oh, nails can be obtained easily, but where will you get the foliage for covering the roof?" asks "Some Moishe" teasingly.

"You're somewhat funny today," remarks Hershke.

"Am I, really?" replies "Some Moishe," and both men look straight into each other's eyes, then burst into laughter.

My curiosity was aroused to the utmost, for I could not perceive, how in the world, with several strips of boards and a handful of logs, a tabernacle could be constructed? I obtained mother's permission to watch the construction work, and Moishe even consented to let me act as his assistant.

HOW TO BUILD A SUCCAH

"Come, look what a grand Succah we have built," I called to father, and pulled him outside to inspect the Succah.

Father rejoices in the accomplishment, lauds our handiwork, and smilingly inquires of Moishe, pointing at me:

"Was he of great help to you, Reb Moishe?"

"Some help," comments Moishe, and looks painfully at the upper uncovered space of the tabernacle.

"If only Hershke would hurry with the branches to cover the roof, then we could have some Succah," promises Moishe.

At long last, on the very eve of the Succoth festival, he brought a full cart, not of the regular branches of fir trees, or evergreens, or pine trees traditionally used for this purpose, but some sort of greenish willow, that grew on the banks of the river. We began in a hurry to cover the top of the Succah, that is the covering was being done entirely by Moishe himself, for I had my hands full driving away the multitude of goats that rushed to chew up the green bitter tasting weeds, as if they were a most delicious morsel.

Finally, while I kept up the struggle with the goats, the last branch and twig of the willows was placed in safety on top of the Succah, and the goats departed, frustrated in their efforts.

Now we began to decorate the interior of the Succah. Clean yellow sand was strewn on the ground, and on the walls were hung up all kinds of quilts and blankets, from all the three households. When the supply of these was exhausted, shawls appeared, and then table cloths, and, as a last resort, even bed sheets. Then tables were carried in, stools and benches, the candle sticks and the candles, the plates and the table silver. The candles are lit, and the three housewives perform their women's benediction over the holiday candles, while father and I go to the synagogue to attend the evening services of the Feast of Tabernacles. Returning we go directly to the Succah, and father sings the benediction over the cup of wine. I hear his melodious voice, and enjoy the special holiday text and festive tune of the benediction:

"For you have chosen us
And you have sanctified us
From among the nations."

I understand these words, although they are sung in Hebrew. This is no mean thing, to feel that you belong to a people which enjoys special distinction from the Lord! A chosen people! I feel happy and proud for such a fortunate selected people and I feel as if I were a prince, yes, a prince, and the succah is a palace, and directly overhead, right on the roof of the succah the Divine Presence is visiting us, and here sits my mother, my beautiful mother, the Queen of Sheba, and right here, on the morrow, we shall bless the "esrig," the most gorgeous of all fruits, in conjunction with the palm branch and all the appurtenances of the ceremony. Where is there one equal to me in my pride and glory?

Next to father, "Some Moishe", and then Hershke recite their benedictions in turn, but these are plain ordinary prayers, of no comparison with father's. Then in sequence comes the hand ablutions, the saying of grace over the chala, and finally the three mothers are bringing in the good, tasty, flavory, spicy, warm stuffed fish. Each household is assembled at its own separate table, the tables are piled high with chala, and all hands are now busy dipping and dunking the soft white chala into the steaming fish soup. All mouths are silently engaged in eating, a breeze is blowing through the thin, makeshift walls of the Succah, and through the frail protection of the willow roof, the candle lights are flickering, the tallow is melting; everybody is engrossed in the holiday meal, and it appears to me that it is not a succah at all, but a royal palace, a great brilliantly illuminated palatial residence, and we, Jews, as princes, nobles, the elite, the chosen are seated here to enjoy the magnificent repast.

What other nation has the privilege of sitting and eating in such a glorious Succah, covered with green willow, strewn with yellow sand, decorated with the most gorgeous quilts and blankets; to participate in such superb repast of chala and fish, which is the most delicious of all dishes, not to mention specially and in addition.

Suddenly, bang . . . crash . . . down comes the roof with willows, the walls collapse, a goat comes flying down right on our heads! The candles are extinguished, it is pitch dark, the tables overturned, and all that was on them, the chalas, the dishes, the fish, the silver,—fallen to the ground, and in the midst of these, all the participants with the goat in the center are lying prostrate in the yellow sand. Above, the moon is shining, the stars are twinkling, and the goat, recovering from its fright, jumps up, looks around inquiringly, and then scurries over the upturned benches, tables and over our heads, bleating pitifully.

I survey the situation: the candle lights are out, the dishes broken, the food in the sand, all of us frightened to death, the women shrieking, the children crying; a ruin, devastation.

"Some Succah you have built," Hershke Mamzis turns to us getting up, with sarcasm and indignation in his voice, as if he had paid an exorbitant price for his share in the Succah, "Some Succah, if a lone goat could wreck it!"

"Some Succah!" joins "Some Moishe", slowly rising from the ground, degraded and humiliated, and wondering how this demolition came about, "Yes, some Succah!"

This story is from the Jewish Survey.

Take a second look at the label next time you buy salt. Does it say "Iodized"? Iodized salt tastes the same as ordinary salt but it has been treated to prevent simple goitre. Residents of inland areas, whose regular diet contains few of the seafoods rich in goitre-preventing materials, should take advantage of this cheap and easy protection. Look for the "iodized" label.

Dental experts agree that tooth decay can, to a very worthwhile extent, be prevented. Certain drugs are showing great promise for the prevention of dental decay but their full effectiveness is not yet known. Dentists say the regular use of the tooth brush, avoidance of too many sweets, and twice-a-year visits to the dentists are the best means of preserving healthy teeth.

Tuberculosis was once one of the foremost killers in Canada, but during recent years medical science has pushed it farther and farther down the scale. Tuberculosis is most easily cured when discovered early, before outward symptoms are visible. Chest x-rays which detect early TB, are free in most parts of Canada. Check up on your health today.

With a view to establishing Jerusalem both as political and spiritual center of Israel, a committee of Jerusalem officials has undertaken to erect a massive central synagogue in the heart of the holy city, the World Mizrachi headquarters reported. The projected building, to be executed in elaborate design, will be used for national and religious celebrations, as well as for daily services. The Jewish National Fund has been approached for a suitable land site.

The best estimates that can be made for Canada suggest that there are at any one time 200,000 people disabled on account of mental sickness — 100,000 permanently and 100,000 temporarily — and another 600,000 partially disabled. These 800,000 mentally unwell people constitute a population larger than any Canadian city except Montreal. Government programs for better mental health need your support.

18. Describe the special ceremony which takes place in the Synagogue on Hoshannah Rabbah.

19. On what day of Succoth are Memorial Services for the dead conducted?

20. How do children generally [illegible] Torah?

ANSWERS

1. Booths or Tabernacles; nine days.

2. Shemini Azeret (Feast of the Eighth Day, or the Eighth Day of Solemn Assembly).

3. Because on that day the one year cycle of the reading of the Pentateuch is completed and resumed.

4. Hol Hamoed, or week days of the Feast.

5. This festival occurred originally during the fruit harvest in Palestine and was observed as thanksgiving at the completion of the entire harvest.

6. It commemorates the wanderings of the Israelites in the Desert of Sinai, following their exodus from Egypt.

7. Hag HaSuccoth — (Festival of Booths) Hag HeAsif — (Festival of Ingathering) Z'man Simhatenu — (The Season of our Rejoicing). These names suggest various phases of the significance and observance of this festival.

8. Dwelling in Succahs or huts, and the waving of the Lulav and Etrog.

9. The mother blesses the candles and the father and children recite the Kiddush and sometimes partake of their meals in the Succah.

10. To recall the temporary huts which our forefathers built as dwellings during their wanderings in the Wilderness of Sinai.

11. The erection of larger Community Succahs by Synagogues and Jewish Community Centers, which are utilized by the Jewish community at large.

12. It is an emblem of the Galut (Exile), and suggests the temporary abodes which the Jews have found in various lands from which they were uprooted by persecution.

13. A festive palm branch which is waved by observant Jews during the Succoth festival; a palm branch, three myrtle twigs (Haddasim), two willow branches (Avarot), and a citron (Esrog. "Lulav") is the word applied for short to all elements, which are arranged in a bouquet.

14. During the chanting of the Hallel prayers the Hazan waves the festive branch in all directions —north, south, east and west, as an acknowledgment of God's sovereignty over nature.

15. At the end of the Service, processional circuits, led by the Reader, are made around the reading desk or Bimah. The Lulav is carried and special hymns, beginning with the word "hoshannah" are chanted.

16. The procession around the altar in the Temple Court.

17. An osier or willow branch made up of five small twigs, tied together with strips of willow bark or palm leaf. It is used in the Synagogue in the morning of the seventh day of Succoth.

18. Processional circuits are made around the reading desk seven times. At last, with a petition for forgiveness of his sins, each worshipper strikes his branch a few times on the desk or bench before him, and throws it away. Poetical prayer are recited, among them one full of Messianic hopes—"Kol M'vaser, M'vaser V'omer"—"A Voice brings news, brings news and says."

19. On Shemini Azeret, the eighth day of the Succoth festival.

20. They carry Jewish flags during the "hakafot" (processional circuits) with the Holy Scrolls, and are called up to recite the blessing over the Torah.

The above is adapted from the Jewish Welfare Board book, "The Jewish Holidays," by Dr. Mordecai Soltes.

Swimming is one of the healthiest sports known to man. It benefits the muscles of practically all parts of the body. But swimming in polluted waters is a dangerous business, often leading to the contraction of serious diseases. Make sure the waters you swim in have been tested and approved by local health authorities.

Only someone who has suffered an actual experience can appreciate the misery caused by an attack of poison ivy. And every season, thousands of picknickers, hikers and campers fall prey to the unobstrusive flower with the irritating secretion. Outdoors-men should learn to recognize this plant, particularly if they show signs of being allergic to it.

The Most Beautiful Thing on Wheels!

Any way you look at it, there's an unmistakable stamp of distinction about the new Pontiac. It's a beauty from the front and it's a beauty from the rear — it has a personality all its own.

Whether you see the "Silver Streak" flashing by you in traffic — notice it ahead of you on the highway — or look at its smart silhouette at the curb — you know immediately that it's a Pontiac, and something very special among automobiles.

But those who drive a Pontiac know that its performance is equally unmistakable. There's nothing quite like a Pontiac for sparkling alertness, for smooth, effortless power. And, as the miles unfold, you'll appreciate Pontiac's fine-car comfort and luxury and the amazing driving convenience of GM Hydra-Matic Drive*.

And what does all this cost? Far less than you think — for Pontiac, wonderful as it is, is priced just above the very lowest. Besides the famous thrifty six, Pontiac offers the lowest-priced straight eight in Canada.

We would like very much to give you the whole Pontiac story — a story that covers everything that makes a car really good. Why not come in soon?

PLUS ALL THESE ADDED ADVANTAGES

1. Completely New Bodies by Fisher.
2. Wider Seats — Added Room.
3. New Wide-Horizon Curved Windshield.
4. New Dial-Cluster Dash.

CLASS IN COOKERY

BUTTERSCOTCH CAKE

two cups once-sifted cake flour three teaspoons baking powder
one level teaspoon salt eight tablespoons butter seven-eighths cup brown sugar one-quarter cup corn syrup
two well-beaten eggs
three-quarters cup milk
one teaspoon vanilla

Measure and sift together the flour, baking powder, and salt. Cream the shortening well and gradually stir in the brown sugar. Stir in the corn syrup. Add well-beaten eggs, a little at a time. Combine the milk and vanilla. Add the dry ingredients to the creamed mixture alternately with the flavoured milk, combining lightly after each addition. Turn batter into square nine-inch cake pan that has been greased with butter, and bottom of pan lined with parchment paper. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) about forty-five minutes.

Mrs. G. Goldman,
500 Markham Street, Toronto.

APPLE SAUCE SPICE CAKE

one-half cup shortening
one cup granulated sugar
one-half cup raisins
one-quarter cup nuts
one and one-half cups pastry flour one egg
one teaspoon baking soda
one teaspoon cinnamon one-quarter teaspoon ground cloves
one cup apple sauce

Cream sugar and shortening. Add beaten egg, sifted dry ingredients, and apple sauce. Mix well. Pour into cake tin, and pat down. Bake in moderate oven, 335 degrees, for three-quarters of an hour.

Mrs. A. Goodman,
50 Burnside Drive, Toronto.

German City Bars Doctor As Jew

The Municipal Council of Offenbach barred a physician from the post of city gynecologist because he was Jewish, the Frankfurter Rundschau charged. Dr. James R. Newman, director of the Office of Military Government for Hesse has ordered a complete investigation.

According to the Rundschau report, which is considered as "no doubt correct" by a Military Government official, the Offenbach Municipal Council met on September 1 to choose a head doctor for the gynecological clinic of the municipal hospital. Five candidates appeared before the Council.

One of the candidates, Dr. Herbert Lewin, told the Councillors that he was a Jew and had been interned in a concentration camp. In a secret ballot the councillors were reported to have elected Dr. Lewin by a margin of one vote.

Some members of Council, including one of the borough mayors and the Lord Mayor immediately asked for a new, open vote.

"Here is a man," Mayor Kasperkowitz asserted, "who comes from a concentration camp and whose family, as he told you himself, died in gas chambers or were murdered. As a consequence, he would take over his job with the resentment of his race and with the feelings of revenge of a former camp inmate."

A new and open ballot was agreed to and Dr. Lewin lost.

The United States Military Government announced that a "complete and thorough" investigation would be made.

During recent years millions of dollars have been spent and many of the world's top scientists have been engaged in a battle against cancer. The fight has not been without positive results and now many cases of cancer, if discovered early, can be cured. If you have reason to suspect cancer, don't let fear or neglect put you off. See a qualified physician at once. Time is important.

In 1947 Canada's tuberculosis death rate reached the lowest point yet struck — 43.4 per 100,000 population. This figure represents a decrease of 28% in the past ten years. Several factors contribute to this picture including more hospitalization facilities, better scientific knowledge and earlier detection. Chest x-rays detect early TB. Have one now. It may save your life.

How to GIVE YOUR CHILD A BETTER START

Your little boy or girl has a long road to travel before meeting with the responsibilities of manhood or womanhood. Your own experience, however, will tell you how wonderfully helpful a Junior Estate Policy will be then. Until your child is 21, this policy includes a little life insurance and an emergency cash fund to use, if necessary, for education, wedding plans, or a start in business. Best of all, at age 21 the life insurance automatically increases to $5,000 without change in premiums. Imagine how helpful it will be to your son in manhood to have five or ten thousand dollars essential life insurance at childhood's premiums. And there are suitable options for girls.

MARRIAGES

ROSENBERG-REITMAN

The marriage of Miss Anita Reitman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Reitman, of Detroit, Mich., to Leonard Rosenberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Rosenberg, 288 Willard Avenue, Toronto, took place at Sharrey Zedek Synagogue, in Detroit, on July 10, Rabbi Morris Adler and Cantor Jacob Sonenklar officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a white gown fashioned with a fitted lace bodice, Peter Pan collar, long, pointed sleeves; and satin skirt, with a double net over-skirt, with floral lace applique. Her finger-tip-length veil of tulle illusion was fastened to a poke-bonnet headdress, trimmed with clusters of lilies-of-the-valley, and she carried white orchids. Mrs. Stanley Rosengarten, of Detroit, was her sister's matron of honor, wearing a blue off-the-shoulder gown, designed with a full skirt. She had a coronet of flowers in her hair and carried blue orchids matching her gown. The bridesmaids were: Misses Lorraine Lutsky, Esther Migdol, and Beverly Koslow, all of Detroit, dressed alike in pink off-the-shoulder gowns, with full skirts; with floral coronets in their hair; and hand-bouquets of mauve orchids. The flower-girls were Andrea Sue Rosengarten, of Detroit, in blue, and Sharon Sherman, of Detroit, in pink, wearing long dresses, matching those of the bridesmaids; and matching bonnets. They carried baskets of rose petals. Edward Rosenberg, brother of the groom, was best man, and Robert Sherman, of Detroit, Harry Rosenberg, of Toronto; and Stanley Rosengarten, of Detroit, were ushers. Receiving, the bride's mother wore a grey taffeta gown made with a full skirt and Queen Anne stand-up collar, and cap sleeves; with blue shoes, and long, blue gloves, and corsage of blue orchids. Mrs. Rosenberg assisted, wearing a grey crepe gown, made with a high neckline and cap sleeves. She had pink shoes long, pink gloves; and a corsage of pink orchids. For the wedding trip to Miami Beach, Florida, the bride wore a navy-blue suit, with navy-blue accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Rosenberg are residing in Detroit, Mich.

Israel Has Settlement Of Egyptian Jews

Some 3,300 years after the Jews fled Egypt, pursued by Pharaoh, a group of eighty Egyptian Jews has established Israel's first Egyptian kibbutz, or settlement, at the foot of the ancient hills of Ephraim.

The new home is a wild rock hill near Petah Tikva and the Arab Legion border of the Nablus-Jenin triangle—ground scarred by last year's fighting. This whole area was in the hands of Iraqis who controlled not only the strategic hills and valley in the gateway to Tel Aviv but near-by Ras El Ain, water pipe line to Jerusalem.

Now a handful of Egyptian Jews are to turn this treeless, grassless hill into Israel's newest farm colony. They have named it Nachshonim after Nachshon, who left Egypt with Moses and was the first to step into the Red Sea. Nachshonim now fittingly means Vanguard, for these are the vanguard of hundreds of thousands of Jews living a precarious life as minorities in Arab countries. Israel hopes these may soon be exchanged with the Arab minority there. Despite its economic problems, Israel is determined to keep its arms open to all Jews in danger, and nowhere are they in as much danger as in near-by Arab states. This first Egyptian settlement is to be a model for getting new immigrants onto the land, writes Ruth Gruber, in the New York Herald Tribune.

Many came three or four years ago. A beautiful girl from Cairo whose costumes included gay earrings and blue shorts and who spoke English and French perfectly, said, "I can't give you my name because my parents are still in Cairo; their lives would be endangered."

A dark-haired young man who had worked for an American oil company in Cairo said, "We Egyptians are building this new home for our defense, for settlement and for absorbing new immigrants."

He left Egypt four years ago and went to Ein Hashofet, an American kibbutz in the north, where most of these young Egyptians received preparation for working on the land. Later they went to Ramat Hasharon, where they remained three years, learned agriculture and small industries and set up an olive-oil plant. In the the war the kibbutz moved to the Negev to defend one of the southernmost spots, and several of the members fell.

Now, with twenty other boys and girls from Belgium, Morocco and North Africa, and even a refugee who had come on Exodus 1947, they were beginning their new home. In trucks, buses and a station wagon, a few hundred people had come to help celebrate. On the hill they had strung a banner inscribed, "A strong tower before the enemy that will imbue faith and stand for justice."

There were speeches, then the people ate sweets from a table full of Israeli chocolate crackers, bread, cake and lemonade. Young watchmen fired their guns into the air, every one sang the national anthem, and then joined hands in the Israeli folk dance, the Hora. For each it was an exciting day whether they had come from the crowded streets of Cairo or ancient Alexandria, they saw this wild barren rock in the spirit in which the American pilgrims viewed Plymouth Rock.

And like the early Americans, these Egyptian Jews are building against time, fortifying against the enemy at their gates, building shelter for their families and earning their bread. A handsome young pioneer said, "Now you see only tents, the skeleton of our dining hall, a few outhouses, a tractor and water barrels. In a few days there will be houses. In a few months our land will be plowed and we will have running water. A few years and you will see our village with white houses, pink roofs, cows, chickens and children, with agriculture, our olive-oil plant and quarry."

SEMINARY HONORS

ary officers: Alan M. Stroock, chairman of the board of directors; Henry S. Hendricks, chairman of the board's executive committee, who was ill and unable to attend; Federal Judge Simon H. Rifkind, a graduate of the seminary institute and vice-chairman of the board; Lewis L. Strauss, a member of the United States Atomic Energy Commission, as president of the library corporation, and Maxwell Abbell, chairman of the national planning and campaign committee.

Judge Rifkind, former adviser on Jewish Affairs to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in the European Theatre of Operations, and principal speaker at the ceremony, called upon Jewish lay leaders for more active cooperation, saying:

"Judaism does not divide the community into clergy and laity, but only into the learned and ignorant."

Judge Rifkind added that it was the laity's responsibility to restore the Jewish tradition of "an educated and learned laity," to so mold their personal conduct that they would serve as exemplars of a life "enhanced and ennobled by Jewish tradition and dedicated to their ideals."

Dr. Finkelstein called for the strengthening of traditional Judaism in America. He declared that "no task confronting our generation surpasses in importance that of understanding the central role of men of affairs in the counsels of each people, each religious tradition and the world at large."

SEE NEED

Bnai Jeshurun, 257 West Eighty-eighth Street.

Dr. Goldstein returned from Israel after a year's leave of absence during which he served as treasurer of the Jewish Agency in that country.

Preaching at a "welcome home" sabbath service, he told his congregation that while there are many religious trends in Israel, nevertheless "every individual in his personal life is free to follow his own point of view on religious observance or belief."

National institutions, however, and the "public aspects" of community life, he pointed out, show the same deference toward Jewish religious traditions as is shown in the United States."

He noted, for example, that in the U.S. Sunday is the public day of rest and Christmas is observed as a legal holiday. In Israel Saturday is the public day of rest and important Jewish festivals are observed as legal holidays.

Religious education is not compulsory but optional, said Dr. Goldstein, and synagogue attendance is up to the individual.

"When great occasions arise," he added, "such as war crises or thanksgiving for victories, the masses turn to the synagogues."

COMMUNITY LEADER

peal, a vice-president and director of the Home and Hospital of the Daughters of Israel, treasurer of the Jewish Conciliation Board and a founder and for many years president of Beth David Hospital.

Mr. Sachs was interested in the Jewish Theological Seminary, the Bronx Hospital, American Jewish Congress, Zionist Organization of America and the Young Men's and Young Women's Hebrew Association.

Other groups that claimed his interest were the American Arbitration Society, Beth Abraham Home for Incurables, Hebrew Shelter and Immigrant Aid Society, Yeshiva University, Grand Street Boys Association, the Amen Boys, Ionic Masonic Lodge, Grossman Knights of Pythias Lodge, Franklin Lodge of Bnai Brith, Beth Hamedrosch Hagodol of Harlem, West Side Institutional Synagogue, Temple Ansche Chesed and Congregation Shaare Zedek, from where his funeral was held.

Mental health depends to a large extent on the conditions in the home during childhood. The events outside the family circle have some influence on the character of the growing child, but the important thing is his relations with other members of the family. Nearly every child is provided with average mental equipment at birth, but a child needs love and care and appreciation to develop mental health.

THOUSANDS trod here yesterday

Now, while guests sleep, their footprints disappear as mops slide over the impervious, unblemished surface of linoleum. An occasional waxing and polishing and the tough, resilient cork, bound in springy, oxidized linseed oil, shows no trace either of grit-covered soles, or of the passing years . . . So easy on the Maintenance Account . . . as well as on the feet! Then, too, in its large range of dignified colours and effects, it lends itself to harmony with any "period" scheme . . . at once decorative and tactfully directive . . . Adaptable! Linoleum plays its efficient, unobtrusive part also in the floors of restaurants, theatres, office buildings, hospitals, churches . . . and private homes.

Also Linoleum and Marboleum Tile
